IMPRISONED BY SPAIN

Gustav Richelieu Is Here to Push a Claim for Damages.

IS AN AMERICAN CITIZEN.

He Owned and Sailed the Yankee Doodle and Was Seized and Thrown in Jail in Cuba—Tells a Story of Cruelty and Suffering in a Spanish Cell.

Gustav Richelieu, of No. 502 Fourteenth street northwest, a native of Nantes, department of Loire-inférieure, France, and an American by naturalization, has a grievance against the government of Spain for recent ill-treatment and false imprisonment at Santiago de Cuba, and has filed a claim with the State Department for $20,000 against Spain.

If the facts are as Mr. Richelieu last night stated them to The Times, his claim is a strong one.

Mr. Richelieu was took on the Boston schooner Grando, which lay at Port au Prince, Hayti, last coffee season. He requested of his captain his discharge that he might open a restaurant at Port au Prince.

At the close of the coffee season and as things were otherwise dull, he purchased and fitted out a small schooner, which he christened with the distinctly American name "Yankee Doodle."

ARRESTED AND IMPRISONED.

In this, with a companion, he set sail. The first point made was Cape Haytien and next the mole St. Nicholas. On the 18th of February, after having secured proper papers of clearance, they set sail for the Cuban coast, and rounding Cape May, came to at Alligator Bay, the port for Guantanamo, Cuba.

There was nothing to be done down here, and as there was nothing suspicious in the Yankee Doodle, they proceeded to Santiago, which, under ordinary conditions they would have reached in a day's sail. They carried provisions but for one day, but because of unfavorable winds, the trip required three days.

When they reached Santiago they were faint from hunger, but without being fed, were arrested and thrown into prison.

CRUEL SPANISH PRISONS.

Mr. Richelieu told The Times last night that the jail was full of vermin and disease, that the prisoners were underfed, and that cruelties were practiced. American Vice Consul Hyatt demanded Richelieu's release. This the Spanish authorities refused.

The State Department at Washington was advised and demanded that Richelieu be released. Still the Spanish authorities refused to liberate him. He remained in Santiago jail from February 23 to April 23, when he was released. He was sent aboard the Ward Line steamer for New York by order of the American consul, but was put ashore at Nassau.

There American Consul J. M. McLain took up his case and furnished him transportation to Key West, where friends sent him North. During his imprisonment at Santiago the Yankee Doodle, it is said, was stripped and wrecked. It is for these injuries that Richelieu sues. His attorney is Alexander Porter Morse.

ITS FOURTH CORNER STONE.

Congregation of Mr. Sinal A. M. E. Church Begins Its New Edifice.

Three times during the last quarter of a century has Sinal A. M. E. Church in East Washington been destroyed by fire, but Phoenix has as many times as it has risen from its ashes.

The cornerstone of the new edifice, which is being erected at the corner of Fourteenth and E streets northeast, was laid yesterday afternoon. The ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. John H. Collett, presiding elder of the District, in the absence of Bishop Gaines, was attended by a large concourse of people, composed of members of the congregation, friends from other churches, and the children from the Lincoln and Lovejoy public schools.

The ceremony commenced at 4:15 and was opened with congregational singing, followed by prayer by the Rev. George W. Johnston. The Scripture lessons were read by Revs. W. R. Arnold and J. B. Washington.

The opening address was by Rev. J. C. McElroy, who took for his theme "God in the Church." He was followed by Rev. B. P. Greenwell, who spoke of the religious, moral, and social benefits the church would be to the people in that neighborhood.

The articles deposited in the cornerstone. The Bible, a Testament, copies of the daily newspapers of the city, the names of the general officers of the church, and the names of the congregation.

Struck with a Shovel.

During an altercation between colored laborers at Twentieth street and Florida avenue northwest yesterday, John Moten struck William Offutt a heavy blow over the head with a shovel, inflicting a ghastly wound. The injured man was removed to Freedman's Hospital in the Eighth precinct patrol wagon, and after treatment, to his home, No. 945 Florida avenue. The police are looking for Moten.

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE

Keynote of the Close of the Great Unitarian Convention.

LOVE OF MAN IS LOVE OF GOD

Address of Representative Unitarians at Metzerott Hall—Carroll D. Wright on the Manifestation of God in Man—Dr. Shippen on the Catholic University.

The scholarly and brilliant Unitarians, visitors on this city, took a look last night into the future of their faith. It was the closing session, and the subject was as appropriate as the manner in which it was treated was edifying and interesting.

As usual, the proceedings of the session, which was the closing one of the convention, were attended by a great concourse of people of all denominations.

The venerable Dr. Rush R. Shippen, of All Souls' Church, this city, presided over the deliberations, and after a pleasant, but salutary lesson to late-comers, introduced Rev. Mr. Van Ness, who has been so active and zealous in forwarding the movement for the consolidation of the young Unitarians.

Mr. Van Ness referred first to the outlook for the Unitarian denomination. The question as to what was to become of the young Unitarians was settled at this session, in the formation of the Unitarian Union of the young people. What was needed was the aid of war. Were not the people ready to give $100 to start such a fund? A collection followed this brief speech.

Dr. Shippen said that it was merely his privilege to introduce the speakers. There was no doubt that the results of the convention would be permanent. There were two good reasons why the convention should be held here. First, because of the very liberal manner in which the daily and out-of-town newspapers had reported the proceedings of the convention. There had been no such reports of the session within the past thirty years as those recently published. He desired to thank the newspaper people for their courtesy and intelligent reports.

Second, that Washington was the metropolis of the country, notwithstanding the claims of Chicago or New York.

UNITARIANISM HERE.

Twenty years ago the cause of Unitarianism in this city was weak. In 1875 the larger churches subscribed the money to build All Souls' Church. It could be claimed that this church ranks low among the first five in the United States. It was built by the Unitarian conference, but the results proved that it was money well placed.

Dr. Shippen said that he would consider this convention as the crowning work of his life. After Saturday next the pulpit of All Souls' would be in position to be led by any minister chosen by the congregation. He could assure his successor that he could find nowhere on earth a more lovable congregation of "saints and sweet sinners" than that of All Souls' Church.

Dr. Shippen spoke of the liberality of religious thought in Washington, during which he said:

"Go up to the Catholic University, with its magnificent proportions, and what do we find? You meet Bishop Keane, that brilliant scholar, who uttered at the Unitarian Club in Boston a year ago sentiments that were closely akin to the words of Channing."

"Go into the grand reception room at the University and you see there three portraits, one of Leo XIII. On his right is a cardinal and on his left George Washington. I ask you if that portrait of George Washington is not a proclamation that these mankind counts higher than allegiance to Rome?" (Applause.)

Dr. Shippen also referred to the fact of the election of Hon. Carroll D. Wright, a trustee of All Souls' Church, as a professor in the University, a statement which was also marked with generous applause. "Now, what are we to say of our Presbyterian friends? They have been trying Dr. Briggs but the last encyclopedia tells us that there are 10,000 Presbyterians in the north of Ireland who are Unitarians." Dr. Shippen concluded his brief address with an aspiration for better work in view of the bright outlook for the faith.

MOVING AS AN ARMY.

Labor Commissioner Horace G. Wadlin, of Massachusetts, delivered an interesting and polished address, referring to the outlook to the effect, with the Unitarian "look" had and will have upon the outlook. He congratulated the Unitarians on the spirit of unity and revival which gave them the appearance of moving forward like an army. He referred to the movements for the betterment of the world as God's inspirations, and so we need to-day not a dead Christ, but a living, vitalizing principle.

Rev. L. C. Lathrop, of Syracuse, N. Y., spoke eloquently on the manifestations of the deity in man. He worshipped a God who cared nothing for Himself and all for his creatures. He was nature's spokesman and God's, as were all other men. The tabernacle of God is with men, and He will abide with them. It is not too much to ask that God shall not permit one life, human or brute, to be destroyed. If we despair to hope, we despair of God. God is the suggester of all nobleness, the father of all hearts; and that is enough.

Dr. Shippen after these addresses said that he presumed it had been shown that if Unitarians were not the whole army, they were at least the vanguard in the movement for liberalism in thought and action.

Hon. Carroll D. Wright, United States Commissioner of Labor, the next speaker, was received with great applause. He spoke of the essence of Unitarian faith as the desire to develop the individual with reference to a higher power. The Unitarian theological doctrine was the hardest of all to live up to, because the Unitarian assumed the responsibility of his acts. He believed that if the Unitarian did not live a clean life here he would have to live somewhere else, through all ages, until his life became pure.

Unitarianism may not be able to proselyte the whole nation, but it has shaken off the shackles of some of the old doctrines and shown that there is something better than the old-fashioned hell of which we have heard so much.

MR. WRIGHT'S ADDRESS.

He spoke in praise of the expressions of Mr. Wadlin on the subject of the revival of religion, and the proper ideas of God, as a "perfect God," the idea of perfection to which the mind of the masses was tending. The world is being taught the idea of perfection. Unitarians do not fear the result of scientific discoveries, for in them all we find God. The outlook for Unitarianism is in persistency to find perfection as imperceptibly by Christ, for the sake of the New Testament. It is the bringing of the Kingdom of God to earth and to man. The idea is not to preach about Christ, but to preach Christ.

To his mind the Unitarian outlook was the latest, for it was animated by that spirit which was moving the masses up, wards, though at times there was discontent. Content, however, is not the conviction that there is a continuous progress, means the idealizing of character. With this practical work, there is something encouraging and ennobling. Ours is the policy of constructive evolution, to relieve poverty and decrease crime, and whoever retards that struggle by withholding his service, is the enemy of humanity; he who aids in that struggle is the friend of humanity.

Mr. Van Ness, at this point, stated that the collections for the Young People's Union amounted to $130 in three minutes.

Rev. Minot Savage, who spoke so profoundly and eloquently of the opening of the convention, made the last address. He received a notable demonstration of applause when he rose to speak. He devoted to the criticism made of the Unitarians that they had not grown more rapidly. He said that at an equal age
